Hello,

I know, I know. There hasn't even been the sound of crickets on this blog in a long time.

My writing time and writing focus has gone to my coaching blog for the last couple of years as this one is being phased out.

What I have written there definitely applies to living well with autism and other challenges. We all have something and that something seems to ebb and flow with thoughts and circumstances and a combination of the two.

So inviting you to hop on over to GayleNobel.com and take a peek at some of the latest.

Here are a few samples:

I Don't Know (does that feel scary sometimes?)

Discomfort (yikes, how we run from that, don't we?)

If you would like to be added and receive blogs as they are posted, do nothing and expect to receive a confirmation email from gaylenobel.com (it might say webmaster) in the next couple of weeks.

Thanks for reading and I look forward to seeing you on gaylenobel.com.
